
Resources for Background Checks on Prospective Tenants

Warning: There is a possibility of facing a discrimination claim if you maintain a blanket policy of rejecting prospective tenants who have any kind of criminal history. To avoid problems, you should carefully study the page titled "Using Criminal Records to Screen Housing Applicants" on our website.

You should check court records for the prospective tenant's possible criminal and/or civil litigation history. It should be a red flag if the tenant has been evicted by other landlords. You can also consider obtaining a credit report on the prospective tenant. If you obtain a credit report and decide to reject a prospective tenant at least partly on the basis of the credit report, you must provide the tenant with a "Statement of Credit Denial." See Form 3 on the Forms page.

Note: You should require rental applicants to show you an official photo I.D. such as a driver license because we have observed that some applicants will provide a false name to conceal prior evictions and other adverse information that might be found during background checking.

Private Companies that Perform Background Checks

We are aware of only one local company, Accudata Credit Systems, that performs background checks. Contact: Kevin Thompson, 2801B W. Truman Blvd., P.O. Box 359, Jefferson City, MO 65102, telephone 573-893-7500 or 800-475-6703, fax 573-892-7211.

Most landlords use online services to check the background of prospective tenants. According to our clients, the one most commonly used is AppFolio, which also provides accounting services for landlords. Other online background checking services can be found by doing an internet search for "tenant screening." This search will also locate reviews of these services.
